Code of Conduct

We're here to make UWB Hacks from Home amazing! Let's lay some ground rules to make sure everyone has the best experience possible.

TL;DR
The gist of the Code of Conduct is:
- be respectful to each other
- don't plagiarize other people's work
- breaking these rules will result in consequences

Harassment
Our hackathon is dedicated to providing a safe and comfortable environment and harassment-free experience for everyone, regardless of the following:

- gender
- gender identity and expression
- age
- sexual orientation
- disability
- physical appearance
- body size
- race
- ethnicity
- nationality
- religion
- political views
- previous hackathon attendance or lack thereof
- computing experience or lack thereof
- chosen programming language or tech stack

We do not tolerate harassment of hackathon participants, judges, mentors, volunteers, or organizers in any form. Sexual language and imagery are not appropriate at any hackathon venue; this includes the following:

- hacks
- talks, presentations, or demos
- workshops
- any parties associated with the hackathon
- social media
- any other online media

Plagiarism

Intentional direct plagiarism of code or visual content from other participants and readily available resources on the internet will not be tolerated.

If your project uses visuals or program elements that your team didn't create from scratch, you are expected to attribute credit to the original author(s).

Please apply common sense in situations not defined in this code of conduct. Take this opportunity to showcase your own individual creativity.

Consequences

Hackathon participants violating these rules may be sanctioned at the discretion of the hackathon organizers. Any of the following consequences may result:

- being asked to leave the event
- being banned from future events hosted by the organizers
- having awards revoked

Inquiries

If you have any questions about these rules, please contact the hackathon organizers.

If you feel uncomfortable or think there may be a potential violation of the code of conduct, please report it immediately using the Code of Conduct Violation Report form. All reporters have the right to remain anonymous.